Pres. Tractorbutt's ego escapes, destroys city

by Vain Mark
Scratch it Scandal Sheet

Disaster struck Washington, D.C. yesterday when the ego of GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt escaped and ran out of control, causing an estimated $4,000,000 in damages.

According to University Vice President for Taking the Fall Robert A. Chern-yuck, he and Tractorbutt were in a meeting discussing ways to rip off the student body when the huge ego escaped.

"Well, we were deciding if we should spend the wrestling and badminton money to send Coach (John) Kuester to a basketball camp to learn the game when the President began to convulse," Chern-yuck said. "Then his fat head exploded. Out shot the biggest ego I've ever seen."

Latest reports from D.C. Police Chief Maurice Turner stated that Tractorbutt's ego destroyed the Washington Monument because "it wouldn't reform itself into a giant monument to (Tractorbutt)." D.C. Mayor-for-life Marion Barry could not be reached for comment at the home of his "friend," Tony Montoyo.

"The kids played a great game," Keuster said. "If it weren't for going scoreless in the second half, we would have won."

Besides destroying the monument, Chern-yuck said, the ego demanded air time on all local TV networks, including guest spots on Oprah and The Pat Sajak Show, to discuss its greatness. "The demands were met," Chern-yuck said, "except for the human sacrifices in Tractorbutt's honor and a place in the Baseball Hall of Fame next to Willie Mays."

The ego also headed to area hospitals and forced doctors to perform reconstructive surgery on newborns, making them all look like Tractorbutt. All children are also to be renamed after Tractorbutt. "Now baby Patty, er, I mean baby Stephen Joel Tractorbutt, looks like a tailor from the Old World," said grieving mother Lucy Winters at D.C. General Hospital.

Next, the ego proceeded to The Right Wing in Georgetown and, according to witnesses, ate a nation-size order of cajun wings, dipping them in a cement mixer full of blue cheese. "He used enough napkins to build a tent over Southeast Asia," Right Wing Manager Claude Henry Smoot said. "And for a tip, he said, 'Don't go to GW.'"

The ego then insisted that all the residents of Southeast D.C. come out of their homes and chant "We love Tractorbutt!!" while doing the wave. The Indiana National Guard, led by Vice Weenie Dan Quail, was called out to capture the ego, but it gave them the slip by throwing a giant top hat, often worn by Tractorbutt in ceremonies, at them.

University of Hartford President John Cocktoestoy (of Scotch/Romanian descent), when asked why he had told GW only good things about Tractorbutt, even though his short administration has been marred by tragedy, replied, "Sure we said nice things about him—you took him, didn't you. Suckers! I've got to go and get back to our year-long 'Bye Bye Tractorbutt: See ya' later, you bozo!' Party."

West End tenants stormed by bigwigs

Last week GW administrators, led by Vice President and Treasurer Chuck "Let's Make A" Diehl, broke into the West End apartment building and physically evicted residents in an attempt to finally end the controversy over ownership of the building.

Eyewitnesses reported sighting Rice Hall workers swinging across the street on vines and crashing through the windows of residents.

"It was incredible," GW student Seth Weinberger said. "All of a sudden, the sun was blotted out. I looked up and saw a large dark object swinging from the eighth floor of Rice Hall into a second-floor window at the West End." The object was later identified as GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt emulating his idol, Johnny Wise-acre.

GW Dean of Students Gail "Tiny" Hansom was also spotted during the melee, reportedly wrestling with a 96-year-old man while screaming, "I DON'T CARE HOW LONG YOU'VE LIVED HERE, OLD MAN, GET OUT!!"

One West End resident said she was awakened by Diehl early in the morning. "I was sound asleep," she said, "when suddenly this grotesque man yelled 'GET THE HELL OUT OF HERE. GW OWNS THIS NOW!!"

IT'S OURS, ALL OURS!!"

"Listen, we need the rooms for students," Diehl said later. "We tried to do this the nice way, with this master lease bullshit, but then I said, hey, let's just physically kick them out."

"I mean why not, you know. After all, we're only doing this for the students because we ... ha, ha ... care ... ha, ha ... we really do ... hee, hee, ha, ha, guffaw, chortle ..." Diehl declined to make further comment after falling into a fit of hysterical giggling.

GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester said "the kids played a great game ... they just couldn't play the full 40 minutes."

In a further desire to expand the University borders, GW Vice President for Slave Labor Bobby Chernak led a small group of self-righteous upper echelon types to a homeless shelter, evicting at least 100 shelter residents. "All right, folks, back to the heating grates," Chernak bellowed. "This is GW turf now."

GW lawyer Vincent "Back Off, Man, I'm A Lawyer" Burke said he is writing up a SuperDuper New and Improved Master Lease that will allow GW to procure any building, anywhere, anytime. Diehl said he believes the new lease is a great idea, but added there was a certain joy in "kicking the shit out of anyone who stands in our way."

Terzian throws tantrum, refuses to vacate old office

Witch-in-Chief

Stumbling across a transition meeting organized by President-elect John David Morris in the Marvin Center Monday GW Student Association President Raffi Terzian and Program Board Chair Paul Aironsin barricaded themselves inside the GWUSA offices on the fourth floor of the Marvin Center last night.

The two have announced they will not "relinquish control of student government at GW" and have demanded concessions including enthronement, a bigger office, unlimited Doritos and complete control over all University policy, according to the GW Office of Safe Sex

Looking For a Hiding Place

Scandal rocked the GW Student Association today when University Safe Sex and Security officials called off a raid on a known prostitution ring after discovering GWUSA Pervert-elect John David Morris in the offices of one Alba Makeout.

The ring, which operated out of an office on the fourth floor of the Marvin Center, allegedly provided a wide amount of "special services" to its clientele of past and present student leaders, according to Inspector J. Dick Hardwell. Hardwell said he would speculate on what Morris was doing, but only in the privacy of his own office and without informing the press.

"I don't know why you're all in such a snit," Morris said, straightening his tie. "She's just a friend, a business acquaintance ... we were only talking."

"Even if we were doing something," he continued, "what of it. Now that I'm elected, I don't have to be Mr. Nice Guy anymore, you know. All that was just bullshit! It didn't mean a goddamn thing!! So get off my fucking back, you sniveling little pseudo-journalistic hack!!!" Morris then stormed down the hall, pausing only to strangle an innocent puppy that had wandered into the Marvin Center.

This latest incident occurs in the wake of a number of disturbing anonymous reports concerning Morris and his alleged indiscretions. Most recently, Morris was accused of running off to Hawaii with an unidentified female companion for a "week of sin among the islands" while his constituents suffered in unseasonably cold weather.

Other witnesses report that Morris was seen twisting the heads off dolls while small children cried, running down grandmothers as they crossed the street, selling crack on elementary school campuses, giving grain alcohol to freshmen, exhorting international students to "Speak English or die," sending GWUSA funds to the American Nazi Party and stealing candy from babies.

When questioned about these allegations, the finicky Morris said, "Hey, what a man does on his own time is his own business, right? Besides, I'm in the catbird seat now and Security.

The siege on the offices followed what observers have termed a "temper tantrum" when Tarzian accidentally walked into a transition meeting of the new administration.

"It was really ugly," GWUSA Office Manager Bill Putz said. "He started kicking and screaming ... when he started tearing off his clothes and flatulating, I feared for my life."

Tarzian and Aironsin remain inside, but negotiations with a team of student leaders have been underway since 9 a.m.

This week in GW history

April 1, 1732: Ann Webster is born.

April 3, 1943: A nude sky-diver landed in the University quad, prompting the Dean of Women to dismiss all females from class to see a big "thang." Dean of Women Sally Anne Cavanaugh said, "Considering all the men are away fighting for democracy, I figured many of the girls have never seen a penis. Considering sex organs are truly part of the college experience, I decided to let the girls have some fun."

March 29, 1953: Slammin' Stuie Silverfarb's wardrobe went out of style. Paul Wilkins, GW crew coach, said, "Does this kid ever get out? He's the palest guy I've ever seen, including Chris Crowley."

March 30, 1971: For the first time in Mike Peller's short, pathetic life he played the shepherd in his high school's rendition of "The Little Drummer Boy." Peller was kicked out of the play under a cloud of controversy surrounding the sheep.

April 2, 1987: Jon Klee turned sideways, disappearing from sight for over 24 hours. Klee, who is thin, was flabbergasted. His mother pleaded, "Jon, please eat something, anything."

April 1, 1988: Menu line is invented. Rich "I love Coach Kuester" Zack, and John "Ham 'n' Cheese Hot Wrap" Maynard celebrate by getting drunk and prank calling Lloyd Elliott.

Admissions coupon to replace application

by Pat Rice Hall
Admittedly Warped

The GW Undergraduate Admissions Office announced yesterday the "GW Coupon Deal," in which any student who submits a blank check and a piece of paper reading "I prefer Tractorbutt" to the University will be granted admission.

"It's sort of like the deal Burger King offered, except instead of getting a Whopper you get to attend GW," GW's Director of Admissions George "Ima" Stoner said. "I think we'll bring in a whole new caliber of students."

Stoner, age 137, said those who take part in the new program will receive several fringe benefits. The first 100 participants will be awarded a life-size cutout of GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt and a Vegetarian Mousakka meal, compliments of Marriott Food Service.

Due to the increased numbers of students this program is expected to attract, he said, any individuals who were not born and raised in either New York or New Jersey will be housed and attend all classes in Building JJ.

"This is a special kind of offer that no other school has thought of," Stoner said. "That stupid SAT and rank in class issue is no longer of any importance."

Commenting on the new program, GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester said, "The kids played a great game, they just lost their momentum in the second half."

Stoner said he thought GW will receive a larger pool of applicants due to the elimination of the previous lengthy, in-depth application. "The students GW attracts just don't have the time to fill out an application," he said. "They were much too busy tanning and attempting to beautify themselves."

"But wait, there's more!" Stoner said, getting even more excited. One out of every five participants, he said, will receive a date with the administrator of his or her choice and a free set of Ginsu steak knives. "I know the top dog very well, and anything with two legs could get him in bed," he said. "I know I'd like to, and as for the knives, well ..."

"I was accepted right on the spot," Samantha Silverburg said, drooling. "This is uh, uh ... the place for me. I'm gonna take lots of pictures!"

Trachtenbutt was not available for comment, but the winner of the first "Tractorbutt Date," who wished to remain anonymous, said Tractorbutt was already enjoying the benefits of the new admissions policy.

Stoner said GW is working on a national media drive, advertising on radio, television and the classified section of many teenage magazines, including Tiger Beat.

JEC coup results in bloodbath

by Demented Ho
and
"More Sex" Lesser
Hatchet Sex Slaves

The Joint Elections Committee seized power today in a coup characterized by rampant executions and arrests.

"Poi, oh poi," exclaimed Richie Stifel, the newly proclaimed Dictator-for-Life. "In light of all the complaints about election reform, I felt that this was the best way to handle the situation," he said.

Stifel said he did regret assassinating all the top leaders of the GW Student Association, but he explained that "in any revolution there are casualties. On the whole, I think the event went very well."

Apparently Keith Pettigrew, the newly-named Director of Secret Police, was the mastermind behind the mass executions. In response to speculation that he personally lined Raffi Terzian, Jon Kessler, John David Morris and Jon Klee against a wall and then proceeded to stab, shoot, hang, quarter, behead and castrate these student leaders, Pettigrew responded "Maybe I did and maybe I didn't. I did, however, push Delaine Swenson off a cliff, and I liked it."

Most of the few surviving former leaders of GWUSA are now being held in a secret area pending a hearing by the JEC on whether they are fit to live. "An intensive question-and-answer period is in progress at this time," Stifel said. "I have no further comment and if anyone calls me at home they will be summarily shot by one of our operatives."

GW Men's Basketball Coach John

Kuester, one of the few public officials left unscathed by the bloodbath, had this to say about the coup: "I thought the kids played a hard game, and it's too bad things didn't go better for us in the second half."

Stifel said he felt that only the JEC had the mandate to rule. Paul Barkett, the new Minister of Justice, said "Hell, since we control how the election runs, why shouldn't we reap the rewards."

His first action as Dictator-for-Life, Stifel said, after getting a rubber stamp with his face on it, will be to rewrite the JEC rules so that campus leaders are not elected by popular vote. "That whole election thing was hell. Why bother, nobody votes anyway. I'll just pick who will succeed me."

Other plans, he said, include invalidating all student organization charters and enslaving all active members of fourth floor organizations by forcing them to remove all the tape

Former GWUSA Presidential Candidate Angelo Bianco had this to say about the coup: "That whole thing is just a barrel of monkeys. This is the most incompetent organization I've ever seen."

Stifel commented that only the JEC has "the presumptive nerve to rein in the out-of-control ego of President Tractorbutt. I figure the combined total ego of the JEC should be able to get him under control."

In a related story, former Senate Finance Chair Chris Preble is listed as missing in action in the bloody coup, but it is widely rumored that he is being heavily tortured by Hillel members.

Stifel also announced plans to further expand the revolution. "I envision a JEC," he said, "that will either imprison or execute the top administrators of the University and then set its eyes on the White House."

GW: the best University in the whole wide world

We've changed our minds. We've decided that GW is really THE University at which to be.

First of all, there are the friendly and kind administrators whose help, guidance and prayers have been the essential element in our continued elation for being at GW. The list of the GREAT things at this school seems almost infinite:

- GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt. His kind, thoughtful words and almost unearthly humility never cease to amaze us. He is always so concerned about the students. He even abolished a couple of unimportant sports to make room for ones that don't even exist. His house is so nice too. He was even gracious enough to invite all of us over for hot cocoa. What a guy! With him as our president, we know that our concerns are being met, because he really does care about us.

- Vice President for Something or Other Robert Chernack. What we like most about good ol' Bob is his honesty. He always is so helpful, willing to give us straight answers to all of our questions. He's also such an independent thinker. We're confident that he's willing to stand up to his good friend Tractorbutt when he thinks something is really stupid.

- GW men's basketball coach John "The Kids Played a Great Game" Kuester. What a great coach! Did you know that he played for Dean Smith? That must be why he's such a great coach. GW basketball is soooo exciting! We almost won more than one game. Meanwhile the kids, who played a great game, are so honest. They have had a few minor transgressions, but what's a transgression or two between friends? We all should thank them for buying us lunch in the Rat that day.

Hey! Smith Center Director Mike Peller—where are the sheep? Did we mention that Tractorbutt is sooo humble?

But all of those helpful administrators aren't the only reason that we like this school so much. There are so many other things.

Take, for example, all the students. God bless 'em. When you view the student population here at GW, the words motivated, non-materialistic, unselfish and caring just jump into your mind. These students, especially "The Editing Chick," really care about their fellow man. In a second they would be willing to give up their XXXL Champion sweatshirts, acid-washed jeans and BMWs to help those less fortunate than them. Clearly, our student body is as unselfish and giving as we could ever hope them to be.

By the way, did we mention that Tractorbutt was really humble?

- Housing is yet another thing that makes GW THE place to be. Many of those new to GW are housed in the luxurious, yet homey, Thurston Hall. Students are provided with spacious living areas, one washing machine per 100 students, nice new furniture and at least 1.5 more roommates than you really wanted. The best is when it's 6 a.m. and someone launches a TV from the roof into that fake quad, and you think that the world is coming to an end. Who could forget the SAMmy brothers vomitting in unison outside your door? They even left it so you could see it. Who said we didn't have any school spirit? These are the kind of fond memories you tell the grandkids about.

And then there's the beer. Think about it. For $50,000 a year, you get all the beer you can drink for only 50¢ a case and a free hair weave. Somehow President Tractorbutt, the great businessman that he is, will find a way to make a profit. What a guy! And did we mention that he was humble?

And it doesn't matter that we can't drink in our dorms. Sam doesn't care. And the kids. They're always available to share a case or two—at the University's expense of course.

And what about the menu line? How many times has the phone woken you up at 4 o'clock in the morning just to find out that they're having ham 'n cheese hot wraps the next day? GW's phone service must be the best organized, cheapest and most versatile telecommunications network in the whole country.

And how could we forget those loving, courteous and helpful cafeteria workers who are quick with a smile and even quicker with a handshake? Of course they need more money, more sick time, more vacation time and more free dental care. We understand. We students would do just about anything to help out these kind people, not to mention their employer, Marriott. There's a company that really looks after its people and is dedicated to providing cheap, efficient service to its customers.

So when you really think about it, GW really is THE place to be. Pardon us, but "Yippie!!! We love this place!!!"

Imperialist pigs

The Israelis are imperialist pigs! They are cruel, heartless, stupid, arrogant and they speak a strange language.

Why is it that Americans are so stupid? Why can't they see that all the Jews are just a bunch of racists? The Israelis should give back all of the West Bank, the Gaza Strip and the whole nation of Israel, then ALL the jews could settle in New Jersey.

Now is the time for a peaceful and intelligent negotiation of the Palestinian crisis.

Kessler-style democracy comes to the Soviet Union

The following Soviet ion transmission was picked up by American radar installations in Turkey on the evening of Tuesday, March 27.

"Election 89! The winners, the losers, the Communist Broadcasting Soviet will bring it all to us. I'm Boris Boris, and welcome to our free and democratic elections program." (Theme music, graphics)

BORIS BORIS: The returns are already coming in from the free and democratic elections held today throughout the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics. Of course, the system by which the people have elected their vanguard is both new and complicated, so here's information officer Yefferi Redciclivich to 'splain it all to you.

REDCICLIVICH: Apparently there's a shortage of butt wipe in the workers' paradise.

BORIS: Get on with your report, comrade.

REDCICLIVICH: Well Boris, here's how the votes of millions of comrades cast today will effect their leadership.

In each of 2,540 districts, People's Deputies were elected today. From this group will be chosen the nation's bartenders, cocktail waitresses, fine furniture upholsterers and pizza delivery people. In turn, elected representatives of the bartenders and cocktail waitresses will meet in a back alley in Odessa and slug it out for a seat on the Supreme Soviet. The pizza delivery men will elect another member, with the title of Pizza Hut Supreme Grand Poobah. Furniture upholsterers, along with the powerful party bosses, will then choose other members of other various and unspecified assemblies of the People. All elected officials will then beg for approval from the vodka production work brigade. Then the whole assembly will adjourn for drinks, get tanked and elect our fearless leader again.

BORIS: Well, the polls are closed now and we're able to make our first projections. Our election '89 map will help you follow the progress. Districts won by our leader will appear in red. Those won by members of the bourgeois opposition will disappear from the map entirely, or have their names changed to reflect the greatness of our fearless leader. Since your TV is black and white (unless you're a friend of the fearless leader), just imagine the red.

WE INTERRUPT THIS NEWSPAPER ARTICLE FOR A SPECIAL PLEA FOR HELP FROM THE AUTHOR.

KESSLER: WHERE THE HELL IS MY BICYCLE? WHEN I GET MY

Jon "Boris" Kessler

HANDS ON THE SLOB WHO ABSCONDED WITH MY BRAND NEW SCHWINN SIERRA I'M GOING TO KILL HIM. NO, I'LL RAM HOT SPIKES UP HIS TAIL, GIVE HIM THE DEATH OF A THOUSAND CUTS, STOMP HIM INTO SUBMISSION AND THEN MAKE HIM WATCH KOJAK RUNS. I'M REALLY PISSED OFF

ABOUT THIS. I WANT MY BIKE BACK. I'LL GET THAT BASTARD. I BET THERE AREN'T ROVING BICYCLE BANDITOS IN THE SOVIET UNION. AAAAAARRRG-GGHHHH!

(Editors Note: Don't cry to much. He's got American Express Buyers Assurance.)

AND NOW BACK TO OUR REGULARLY FOOLISH ARTICLE.

BORIS: First returns are coming in from Moscow, where anti-party rebel-rouser Boris Boris (no relation) has just won a seat in the People's assembly of People's assemblies of Comrades Deputies. Comrade Boris, congratulations!

BORIS: Boris?

BORIS: Boris?

BORIS: Boris, this is a cheap gag, let's stop.

BORIS: OK Boris, what do you think accounted for your huge victory today?

BORIS: I told the people about the kinds of freedoms I wanted them to have. I showed them copy of American newspaper The GW Scratch-it, I showed them suggestive videos of Scratch-it babushkas Kristi Messner and Kerry Kane, I told them of great Armenian patriot Raffi Terzian ...

BORIS: Oh sure, it's television programming purge week, so you pour on the bourgeoisie references to sex, violence and individualism. But what about this bicycle thing?

BORIS: I pledged to people that I would search high and low for Comrade Kessler's brand new Schwinn and that all of my followers in Amerika would do the same.

REDCICLIVICH: Mr. Boris, what do you think of those who would tout you as a future candidate for General Secretary?

BORIS: Well, I can type, and I have never lost a bicycle that was under my command.

BORIS: Thank you Mr. Boris. That raps up our special election coverage. Good night, and may all your tomorrows be communist.

Jon Kessler is a graduating senior who is really upset about his missing bike.

Diary of a madman

The word around town is drugs. Washington, D.C., nation's capital, drug capital has become a wilderness, a jungle of violence, pestilence, discontent and decay. It's a war out there, and as members of the city, we are combatants. And when the weather gets hot, so do tempers—they flare like hemorrhoids. And like any hemorrhoid sufferer, I want relief. I want an end to people coming to my door selling encyclopedias. I want a moratorium on the name Dara. I need shirts with sleeves and socks that are 40 percent acrylic. There are many decaffeinated brands on the market just as tasty as the real thing, but that's not good enough. I want satisfaction, and I'm not speaking of the Justine Batemen film (as fine as it was).

Mickey Manson

There I was, sitting on freshly laid fertilizer in the quad, watching a dog mark its territory (the way only a dog can), and a guy (as undeserving as he is of the term) swooped down on me and asked, "Excuse me, do you read the Bible?"

I had been flipping through the pages of my catalog of beautiful brunettes, trying to decide which one I wanted to buy, when this irritating, small, lizard of a man disturbed me. He attempted to establish credibility by introducing himself as a Jehova's Witness. It was then, of course, that I chose to pull the snub nosed .38 from my shoulder holster, and with a smile on my face and a song in my heart pull the trigger, sending blood, bone and brain matter cascading against Bell Hall.

At first, I wondered if my action had been warranted. I was despondent. I searched throughout the campus for the person whose opinion I knew was respected by all—for the man millions idolize. "Raffi T.," I asked, "was I justified, was my conduct unbecoming of a member of your fan club?"

He patted me on the shoulder, stuck his raspy tongue in my ear, and screamed, "My son, your passage to the dark side is complete, find me a gerbil and leave the land of the Zulu now!"

I was vindicated. Returning to the scene I hacked the man's body to pieces with my standard issue GW machete. "He'll make fine pigeon fodder," I thought. But something stuck in my throat, it tasted like toe-cheese. My thoughts turned to all the people who'd ever annoyed me. I checked the number of bullets remaining in my revolver. I wondered if there would be enough to kill the entire cast and crew of Police Academy. I toyed with the idea of procuring a small thermonuclear device for use on a portion of the East coast. I pondered the idea of eliminating the woman who wouldn't give me jujubes at the movies last night, because the concession stand was closed. Death was becoming cheap, like a McDonald's Happy Meal, like getting into GW.

GWUSA President Raffi Terabian, who has been sighted waddling around campus with a severe limp, said he thought these reports would bring about Morris' downfall. "Then the way would be clear for a hand-picked ... uh, more-qualified successor," he said, "or maybe a continuation of the present one—I could do that, you know. I could. I mean it. Just try me."

D.C. Mayor-for-Life Marion Barry offered his complete support for the ubiquitous Morris, however. "My man Morris is off to a great start," he said. "If he'd get out in the sun a little, he could be just like me. Then we'd really show that honky Bush what could be done with this town if we had real asshe ... uh, men in control."

Why the hell are you still here?

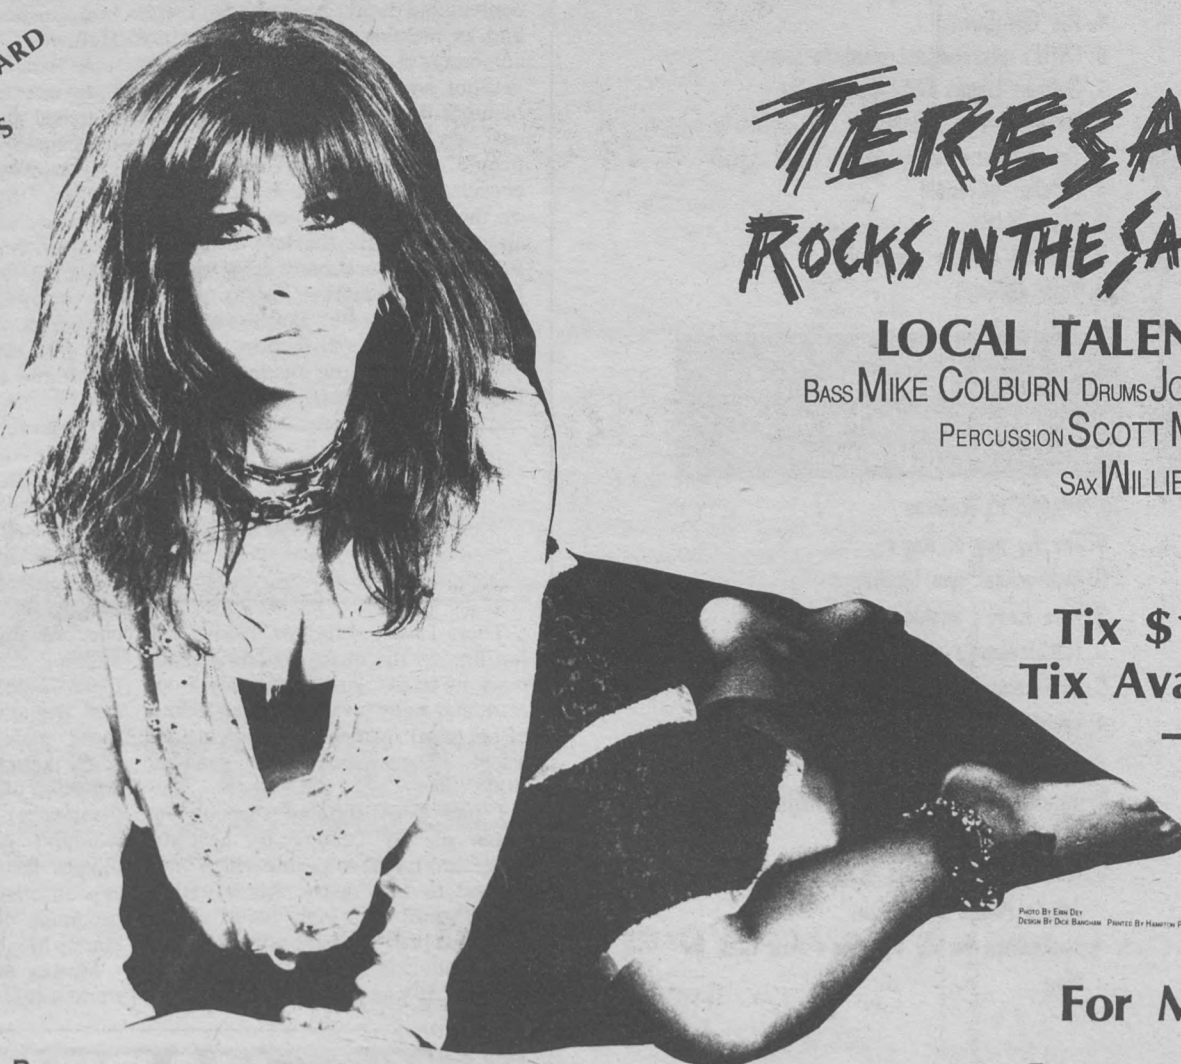

After discovering that Morris was making plans for next year, Tarzian apparently ran to the PB office to discuss the matter with Aironsin. "When Paul heard, his skin turned a ghostly pale and his eyes became red like a demon's," one observer commented. The two then stormed the GWUSA office, using brooms, sticks and old food as weapons.

Office Queen Missy Gerber, who was on the scene at the time of the attack, said the staff tried valiantly to fight off the attackers, "Raffi came storming in, frothing at the mouth, Paul's eyes were the color of the devil. We fought back at first, and my nails are pretty sharp ... but once they started pelting us with Rat chicken nuggets we had to give up."

Most observers have credited the siege to a temporary mental lapse, brought on by the stress of leaving office. "Raff and Paul were just used to running the show," GW Professor of Abnormal Psychology Leonard Snits said. "Their reaction is probably a result of what is known as the Nerd-Power Syndrome (similar to Down's Syndrome) in which individuals who perceive themselves as socially inadequate feel the need to boost their self-esteem through positions of power. When they are forced to relinquish their authority they will often lash out at perceived enemies and do violent, irrational things."

Father and son blow their cover at GWUSA meeting

by Vain Mark
Scratch it News Junkie

Former Law School Senator and GWUSA Executive Vice Presidential candidate Detained N. Swensons admitted Tuesday he was the father of GWUSA President-elect John David Moron.

According to Moron's Brain, Dave Pecker, Swensons and Moron began to disagree during one of the meetings they think are really important. "J.D.

got frustrated and said, 'Daaad. You're a pooh' to Detained. Then Swensons told J.D. he was grounded. That's when we all realized something was up."

Asked about Moron's and Swensons' conduct, GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester said "the kids played a good game. If it weren't for the other team showing up, we could have won. Can you believe I still have my job?"

Moron said his relationship with Swensons, who is 47, was supposed to be kept secret. "Detained, I mean Dad, hasn't been the same since the campaign," he said. "I guess our family squabble blew our cover. By the way, I love this school even though it's only a money-making machine."

According to Moron, he, Swensons and his mother, Sallie Whinebore, Editor-in-chief of the National Law Center's Inadequate, all live in the Student Bar Association Office. "It's a nice room," Moron said, "but I don't like all those wormy Law Students hanging out at home all the time. They voted for me and that's all I wanted—now get the hell out of my life."

"I couldn't understand why (Swensons and Moron) didn't want the secret to get out," Whinebore said. "I don't know what they're speaking of when they talk about 'the rest of the University' finding out. By the way, what goes on in all these buildings around here?"

Pecker said he realized the father/son relationship would be damaging if it got out to the media, but he had been willing to take a chance. "Plus," he added, "if J.D. wouldn't ticket, Swensons said he'd send J.D. to his room."

Hidden truths behind GW's fraternity row

by Masochistic Mama
News Nympho

Sources from the GW Dean of Students' Office, identifying themselves only as Deep Throat I and II, have revealed to The GW Scratch-it that some administrators covered up outrageous incidents of Greek debauchery at GW in past months, some of which violated the University hazing policy.

Sources refused to identify exact reasons for the coverup, except to say that certain members of the University consider GW's reputation more important than "filling young minds with a bunch of hubbub," adding that, "(GW President Sven Noel) Tractorbreath was once a fraternity boy."

According to Deep Throat I, Tractorbreath was caught "boogying the night away" and "slipping some tongue to the little sisters" at a recent Zeta Beta Tau party. He was also reportedly overheard boasting about the real meaning of his label "Iron Teddybear."

In other fraternity news, the peace was disturbed on G Street last night by loud chanting noises coming from the Sigma Chi house. Brothers claim they were chanting the words "Sig Chi," although reports say the noise sounded like "Sieg Heil." Certain brothers have said the chanting is merely "part of a 40-year-old bonding experience."

Sigma Phi Epsilon this year made its pledges take part in a one-day program, "Nerds for a Day." The pledges attended a seminar, Nerd Etiquette, led by brother Chris Crowley and were forced to watch countless hours of Pee Wee Herman videos. A similar program is rumored to be also in effect at Phi Sigma Kappa.

According to sources, the paddles worn by Alpha Epsilon Phi pledges every day are actually lead-weighted, creating pain and pleasure in every step, skip and stumble the future brothers take.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon brothers were caught ritualistically burning copies of The GW Hatchet that did not contain any photographs of any of the brothers. One of them, revealing only a part of his identity, said, "It really pisses us off when we don't get the coverage we deserve." Sources report that only two issues were torched during the entire year.

Sigma Nu has allegedly broken national regulations restricting the brothers from consuming, sniffing or thinking about alcohol by spiking the shrimp at their annual "Shrimp and no Beer" bash. "We just couldn't take it anymore ... and besides, we got bored of the Michelob drivers hanging out at the house," one Sigma Nuer said.

It was also revealed that the Deltas had secretly planned to serve the community by repainting each of the campus' frat houses.

Gargoyles of Rock to roll in D.C.

Abba, Foghat, Genesis, & others to bring gargantuan mega-show to RFK tomorrow

by Noj Yurd

Unless you've been hiding under a teflon stone recently, you must have heard of the coming of the biggest, most drunkenly socially-conscious rock festival ever to hit D.C. tomorrow.

Fonda the noble

The road crew began constructing the mammoth stage early this morning at RFK Stadium and is making final preparations for what has already broken records as the most moneymaking rock festival in the history of the genre. With names like Sissy Spacek, Foghat, Abba and Genesis all performing on one day on one stage, The Gargoyles of Rock tour is destined to rival all others in scope and imagination, combining the best sponsorship with the best causes and turning the whole thing into a giant, day-long love-in.

Woodstock didn't make any money, Altamont was a disaster, Monterey did nothing but destroy brain cells and the Monsters of Rock barely broke even. But the Gargoyles tour, which has already ripped through New York, L.A., Philadelphia and Dallas, promises to be a not-soon-forgotten event.

It all started three months ago when Jane Fonda, evidently tired of acting and marriage, held a press conference unveiling her plans for the awareness-raising tour. "I want to reinstate the sense of community that left rock and roll in the mid-50s," she said. "Through extensive demographics research, we have grouped together the most popular, appealing and wholesome group of rock and roll conglomerates, so put on your dancin' shoes and twist the night away!" She then donned the construction helmet that has become the symbol of the cause, turned on the ceiling fan and thrust her pelvis to an extent not seen since her last workout tape. "I've given up," she cried. "Break out the brew, dudes. Let's party!"

The party she announced was a tour featuring a day-long show kicked off with an acoustic set by Sissy Spacek singing, among other protest songs, "Cum on Feel the Noize," "Rock Me Amadeus" and "I Have an Annoying Accent and I Cry in All My Movies." Part of the show's appeal is Spacek's spontaneity with her wardrobe. At the last show she donned a feathery Vegas outfit, the one before that a Mickey Mouse suit. "Ah lahk to feel unhibited when Ah sang aynd Ah'm durn sick of puyple muykin' me out t' be sum kahnd of grit. Ah mayne, Ah luuv rock and roll," she said.

GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester, who had backstage passes in New York, said, "The kids played a great game, but it didn't work out in the second half."

Following Spacek's set is Fonda herself, in full leotardine majesty with her aerobic dancers, performing hilarious comedy sketches and cardiovascular routines to the beats of "Fame," "Flashdance" and the Jackson's "Can You Feel It?"

Once the crowd has warmed up around noon, on comes legendary rock band Foghat, reuniting for the first time in not enough years. At the first few shows, their set was a bit shaky because even they forgot who they were. Melvin Soythaw, the band's shaggy leader, is quick to point out, "Man, those were the days, man. We think the cause is a good one, man, and we've spoken to so many of our old fans, man, that man, we man, just couldn't resist experiencing, man, once again the exhilaration of performing in front of a paying audience. If rock 'n' roll says anything to me, it says people can get together and make noise for the sole purpose of financial gain."

Foghat will be touring for the first time since they ended an illustrious 11-album career.

"I think Foghat represented all that was glorious about rock music in its heyday," Fonda said while watching guest-crooner Morton Downey, Jr. take the stage in L.A. "It was the kids that mattered then. It should be the kids that matter now. Gosh, I didn't know he was so compassionate. I like his lips."

Following Foghat was legendary Swedish mega-superstars, Abba, also reunited after an eight-year hiatus.

Gargoyles

Because the sold-out crowds have already been driven into a frenzy by both Foghat and the free Shaffer being distributed (they sponsored the event), Abba drives them a little bit over the top as they open their two-hour set with "Waterloo." Twenty-two drunk teenagers were killed moshing during their set in Dallas.

Closing and climaxing the show is Genesis, which has rehired mythological guitarist Steve Hackett, grown their hair and look as though they're trying to shed their overly-commercialized image. Looks can be deceiving, though. Just ask Phil Collins, who couldn't care less about talking to The Scratch-It: "We're trying to garner support for our earlier albums, of which there are many, including Foxtrot, one of whatsisname's records, Trick of the Tail and Wind and Wuthering. We have calculated that if we look like we did back then and perform the songs from that era in our lucrative career, people will buy all of our albums, therefore relinquishing from us the responsibility of being creative, while making four or five times the amount of money."

Thus, who would have thought that a rock festival in 1989 would end with an all-star jam of "Land of Confusion?" Truly an event to witness, all these luminaries on one stage is an inspirational laser-drenched ceremony of good ol' confectionary pop laced with pompous art-rock mixed with whiny, acoustic numbers combined with fake metal. "It was inspirational," one audience member said.

As might be expected in such a large event, traveling around the country on buses is a bit circus-like. "You know how things are when these wild rock and roll stars travel together," said Frieda of Abba. "Well, Phil Collins produced my last album, maybe he'll produce my next child! Hee Hee Hee!"

Fonda, constantly trying to defend the purpose of the festival, said "We have to fight for ourselves. It's important that people see what this is all about, in addition to enjoying the great rock and roll music, they have to feel the true purpose ... GET OFF ME, PHIL!"

"It's the sense of community you get at these large festivals, one band right after another," Genesis' Mike Rutherford said. Throwing his bottles and syringes at the reporter in a fit of rage, his tongue flailing, he then exclaimed "If (Mechanic Paul) Carrack can't wait for this to end, maybe he should do another lame solo album."

In any case, after the glamour and glitz of The Gargoyles of Rock has ended in D.C., it's on to Portland, Maine, Greenland, Siberia and Miami. As Genesis' Tony Banks said, "The world will just have to wait and see what the Gargoyles have in store for the rest of the world. I'm a Gargoyle, you're a Gargoyle, everyone has a little Gargoyle inside them."

If by chance you weren't one of the lucky million who shelled out $60 a ticket to see this show live, Barbara Streisand has brought a film crew and hopes to turn Gargoyles into a major feature release this Christmas. Streisand, no stranger to mega-stardom herself, is confident about the film, tentatively titled Stop Making Rattle and Gargoyles in Orange Hum, which will feature spontaneous on-the-street meetings between Foghat and the native street musicians of Memphis.

Streisand at the helm

"I've met so many wonderful people and made so many wonderful friends, it couldn't possibly go wrong unless there's no God," she said. "People think all I'm good for is singing and acting. I love rock and roll, too. Watch." She then stood on her tiptoes and rocked back and forth, Muppets style. "I can do 'The Hustle' just like any man can, she said. "Eat your heart out, Don."

What are the chances of a

Next time: Angel

"Gargoyles II" tour if this one and its film are successful? "I think if we can prove to the public that there's a place for this kind of thing in America, then many others will follow," Fonda said. "We're already working out sponsorship deals with IBM, Coca-Cola and Sony, and we're going to get great acts like Jermaine Jackson, Angel and Ron Hendren, so stay tuned."

Problems weigh down Marriott director

Dom DeLuise
Hatchet Culinary Advisers

Marriott administrators had no comment today regarding rumors of illicit overspending in the expense account for GW Marriott Food Services Manager William "Big Bill" Yaglou.

According to an anonymous source, the account was in excess of 4 million dollars and was used for the sole purpose of purchasing food for the obese Marriott manager. Yaglou, who is fat, was unavailable for comment, but is rumored to be planning a press conference for sometime later this week.

The expense account scandal comes only a week after a bitter contract dispute with Marriott workers. When asked if the issue of Yaglou's weight, which is galactic in proportions, and enormous appetite was a factor in the negotiations, Union Negotiator Jim H. Offa said "absolutely."

Offa, who was an active participant in the negotiations, said the size of the account and the size of Yaglou, which defies description, was of major concern to a number of union workers. "How can somebody expect to get the meals cooked when this fat guy keeps coming around and eating it all?" he asked.

GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester, who refused to say anything about Yaglou's elephantine size or weight, did say

"the kids played a great game."

Meanwhile, a number of students have expressed concern that Yaglou's appetite, which knows no limits, has been hindering service at some Marriott dining rooms. "If that is why service is so bad at the Rat, then I think the guy should go on a diet," junior Doug Welt said.

The issue of Yaglou's weight, rumored to be in excess of 500 pounds, has been a concern for over a year now, the anonymous source indicated. Some have suggested sending him to a health spa, according to the source, but as yet, no action has been taken. Apparently, most spas have weight limits and it has been speculated that Yaglou, who is rotund, probably exceeds those limits.

"Yaglou is not even allowed to cross the Key Bridge because of weight limits," GW sophomore John Dodenhoff said.

In a related story, students reported that absolutely no food was available in the Colonial Commons dining room between 4 and 7 p.m. yesterday. Sources on the scene reportedly saw the massive Yaglou leaving only minutes before the cafeteria's scheduled opening.

GW Freshman Sam Silverstein, when asked how he was sure the man was Yaglou, responded, "Are you kidding? I see that guy leave here every day before I go to eat. How else do you think I got so thin?"

A rash of fornication plagued GW's campus during the last week, according to Inspector J. Dick Hardwell of GW's Office of Safe Sex and Security.

A gross of Trojan Tri-Paks valued at approximately $400 was stolen from Student Health at an undisclosed time, Hardwell said. In what he said may have been a "related incident," two Thurston residents were arrested after a Housekeeping staff member discovered 100 used condoms in the suspects' wastebasket during a routine room cleaning.

"Usually, I don't care what the kids do," the worker said, "but damned if I'm going to clean up after anybody that fucks that much. God knows what'll be in the wastebasket next."

Safe Sex and Security officers recently released an investigative report on the reasons behind the men's basketball team's losses this year. One officer, who asked to remain anonymous, said, "Well, we went undercover in the Smith Center and discovered that before every game, the men's and women's basketball team has a massive orgy in the pool. No wonder those kids couldn't run, their legs were too tired."

The officer also alluded to several "aids" that were frequently used in the orgies, saying only, "Students should carefully examine all Smith Center rental equipment before use."

GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester, when asked for comment about the frolicking, said, "Well, the kids were real hard. It's too bad they pulled out in the second half."

Two students were found "doing the nasty" in GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt's office shortly before 9 a.m. on March 27, Hardwell said. Apparently the two were discovered comatose on the desk by Tractorbutt, who said, "I don't condone this kind of behavior, but at least they didn't ruin the pictures of me on my desk."

The two have been arrested for indecent exposure and are presently being held in the office of Safe Sex and Security Director Curtis W. "I'm So" Goode.

"We'll release them to the police after we can get all the guys here so the kids can re-enact exactly what transpired for the video cameras," Goode said.

College bowl freaks disqualified

by Pat Rice Hall
College Bowl Cheerleader

The GW College Bowl Team was disqualified from the national finals last weekend due to "freakish appearance," said Program Director Bob Bobstein.

"I know this isn't a beauty contest, but they were just too weird," Bobstein said. "The other teams threatened to withdraw from the tournament if we didn't remove GW."

The situation has sparked controversy among members of the GW community, especially those directly involved with the team. "We are the GW College Bowl team and we are number one no matter what," Team Captain Gary Greenball said. "We will fight this thing to the end."

College Bowl officials were hesitant to cite more specific reasons for the disqualification. However, a source who wished to remain anonymous said one of the GW team members had an unusually large head which distracted other players.

"It was huge," he said. "I wasn't sure we could even fit him in the studio."

Team member Jason Blockhead said the team has contacted the Society for the Preservation of Abnormal Students (SPAS) and asked for their assistance in overturning the disqualification. "I am very proud to be a member of the GW College Bowl team and this is just unfair," he said. "We may not be stud-muffins, but it's the guys with the brains that get ahead in the real world. So all you knuckle-dragging Australopithecans just leave us alone."

Players from Syracuse University said they were very surprised at the GW team. "Like, we thought GW was like, like us," captain Judy "Ice" Berg said. "They were just like, so weird, like, you know."

GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt said the team was disqualified because the members did not look enough like him. "A little reconstructive surgery and those kids will be the International College Bowl champions," he said.

Commenting on the situation, GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester said, "The kids could have played a great game, they were just too weird."

NLC secedes from the Jewnion

by the Roy's Fry Guy
GW Law School Alumnus

Students at GW's National Law Center announced today that they have seceded from the University as a result of their widespread dissatisfaction with GW, a school rated in the 50th percentile of District colleges.

GW Stupid Association President-elect John David Moron could not be reached for comment, but several of his top advisers have voiced outrage over the incident. "Who do they think they are?" GW senior Dave Pecker said. "We don't need this kind of crap from them." Raffi Retardo, outgoing GWUSA President, said he had no opinion "because I don't want anybody to be mad at me."

Some have suggested calling out GWUSA's own para-military force, also known as the GW Young Americans for Freedom. Erik Brown, YAF president and field commander for the 25-man armed force, said, "We're going to go kick some commie butt!"

Students walking across the quad yesterday were shocked to find that a large moat had been built around the entire NLC complex, posing a potential health hazard to all passers-by. "I was just trying to take a short cut across the quad, and the next thing I know, I'm in this big ditch," GW senior Farrell Quinlan said.

As yet, the moat has not been filled, but SBA President Todd Baldwin said the ditch would indeed be filled with water from the Potomac, posing an additional threat to would-be border-crossers.

Reaction throughout the University has been mixed. SGBA junior Marissa Feingold said, "Oh my gawd, it's horrible. Now my nice white sneakers are all muddy."

NLC Dean "Happy Jack" Friedenthal voiced his support for the students and encouraged all other graduate schools to follow the NLC's lead in secession.

GW Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester had no comment on the moat but did say that "the kids played a hell of a game."

The GW Scratch-it has learned the Oliver T. Carr company agreed to dig the moat. "We decided to take the job since we already have so much experience digging big holes in the quad and leaving them unfilled for years," a company spokesman said.

Coronation surprises

The upcoming Retractablebutt coronation is shaping up to be a good time.

All those invited will receive a complimentary urinalysis. The entertainment at "the man's" gig, at his request, will be made up of George W.G. (what the hell does that stand for?) Stoner on the accordion and Smith Center Director Mike Peller doing his world-famous sheep dance.

WRTV agreed to broadcast the event, but it has no listeners. Station manager Derek Smalls said,

"I don't even know where the station is. I'm kinda like lukewarm water."

"The gopher problem has forced the inauguration inside, prompting Academic Evaluation hater Peyser to shave his entire body and perform self-imposed liposuction," GW Assistant Greenskeeper Carl said.

The Retractablebutts invited 1,800 of their closest fellow egomons, including Gilligan and the Skipper, too.

CIA invades campus, recruits

by Pinko Lee
Inebriated Infidel

It was revealed today that the Central Intelligence Agency, renowned for its overtly covert operations, has been planting agents throughout the GW campus to recruit gung-ho, right wing, weapons-proficient students who yearn to secretly kill evil foreigners or, instead, to secretly train good foreigners to kill the evil ones themselves.

Which foreigner is classified as evil and which is not is at the discretion of CIA supervisors, so all recruits must be ready to kill, but not be concerned about whom.

Although no students have been directly contacted by agents, several Hispanic cafeteria workers have allegedly been offered free travel to southern Honduras and better-than-post-strike pay if they dress up in fatigues and play bocce ball in one of the many contra camps that were converted to leisure centers during the Central American cease fire.

Last week, there was pandemonium outside Fungur Hall (formerly Building C and soon to be the William Casey Memorial Hall after Ronald Reagan donates all the proceeds of his upcoming movie with Bob Hope, "On the Road to Libya," to the University) when agents and students met for a seminar entitled "Soviet Propagandizing and Demoralization of the Contemporary American Housewife through Subliminal Communist and Carnal Messages in Daytime Soaps."

In what GW Security called "a small gesture of dissatisfaction" with the CIA's recruitment tactics, all four members of GW's Progressive Student Union shaved their heads, dressed in rags and poured gasohol over themselves, then whipped out their pink Zippos and flambeed themselves.

A wolfpack of Young Americans for Freedom, looking impeccably Aryan and almost von Ranson-esque, stopped at the scene to shower the PSU members with lighter fluid and toast marshmallows while singing "Deutschland Uber Alles."

In an attempt to recruit journalism students, several CIA agents allegedly approached the acting chairman of the GW's Journalism Department, Robert

Willson. When asked which prospective journalists were fit for the CIA, Willson bellowed, "The kids here are a bunch of goddamn pussies! You want good men, hire Marines, dammit!"

The agents also interrogated Associate Journalism Professor Charles Puffenbarger about his close association with alleged leftist reporters, including Casey-killer Bob Woodward, at the "anti-American" Washington Post. To this Puff casually replied, "Heck, I'm no communist, I just got blotto all the time with those Post guys. We never talked politics."

Agents also ordered FBI surveillance of all students who signed up for former Senator Lowell Weicker's (R-Conn.) class.

The agents then went to the Smith Center to recruit basketball players who were fluent in Russian to infiltrate the Soviet Olympic basketball team so the U.S. can be insured of victory in the 1992 games. After a while, however, they settled for the few who could string four syllables together.

When asked for his reaction to the recruitment of his players, Coach John Kuester said "the kids played a great game, but it didn't work out in the second half."

Scratch and match your future residence hall

by Cream Puff
Yag's Main Squeeze

A new and improved housing lottery process gets underway this week, and, from all indications, it looks like a winner. According to Annie "Get Your Gun and Get Off My Case" Webster, "This baby's awesome. In one classic move I can screw over all those wormy annoying freshmen who keep bugging me. It's totally awesome!"

The new system, which began last week with the distribution of game cards to all students planning to live in the residence hall system next year, is intended to be a fair system, as opposed to the previous method of assigning lottery numbers based on credit hours.

Students participating in the lottery will scratch off the six silver bands on their game cards. "Match three of the same hall and you can live there. Simple as that," Webster said, adding that the offer is void where prohibited, and employees of the General Foods Corporation, residents of Battle Creek, Michigan or anyone admitting to have attended more than one GW volleyball match are not eligible to participate.

When asked how the new lottery procedure will affect students, GW Men's Basketball Coach John

Kuester said, "The kids played a great game, but they just couldn't hold it together in the second half."

Webster (who said she prefers to be called Belinda: She-god Almighty Ruler, and asked that everyone do so from now on) also announced plans for future freshman living arrangements. "Yeah, we're just going to shove all 800 of them into a suite in Adams (Hall). If they have a problem with that, they can just go to hell. You know we're not running a baby-sitting service here. For Christ's sake, why don't you just grow up? Why don't you just go home and cry to Mommy for a change. I'm sick of all of you."

GW President Stephen Joel Trachtenbergermeister commented on the new housing arrangement. "Hey, that's not my problem. Listen, I went to the school of hard knocks myself, you know. We weren't led around by the hand by any administration. And I think I turned out fantastic, don't you?"

Bergermeister said the University plans to rent out Thurston Hall to non-students, but did express some reservations. "I don't think we'll find anyone stupid enough to pay this ridiculous rent. Oh well, that's not my problem!"

We don't want anyone to feel left out

Vane dies while IFC does him up the butt

by Demented Ho
Vain Fan Club Member

The GW Scratch-it staff mourned the passing of Scratch-it Arts Editor Mark Vane yesterday after Vane, 21, a Texas native, died during a brutal gang rape by the Interfraternity Council Tuesday night, according to campus security.

Officers said Vane was last seen alive talking on the phone on the fourth floor of the Marvin Center. "He just bounded out of the office in a frenzy," Assistant News Editor Patrice Sonberg said. "That wasn't unusual, though. I figured he was hot on the trail of some story."

Apparently, Vane did make it to the elevators, but was intercepted by IFC members hiding behind the kiosk, who overpowered him and dragged him back to their office. According to security reports, IFC members first broke his trademark glasses and tape recorder and then began to rape him, reportedly screaming such insults as "Bruce Springsteen sucks!" and "Journalists eat shit!"

Eventually, according to an anonymous source, "Vane squealed like a pig, murmured 'Get a reporter on this,' and then just gave up."

IFC members, when asked about the incident, showed no remorse. "Sure, we did it. Since he ruined all our fun with hazing our pledges, we had to get out our aggressions some other way," IFC Revenge Manager Rob Nichols said.

"Yeah, I did Vane," said an unidentified member of Delta Tau Delta. "I hate that little prick."

Mike Goff, IFC pervert, said, "It was a hell of a lot of fun. I mean, we've done this kind of stuff with our pledges, sure, but when (name withheld by request) brought up the proposal for the attack at our last meeting, we all just jumped on the idea. We're all very excited it went off so well."

GW's Men's Basketball Coach John Kuester, when asked about Vane's (See GANG BANG, in back alley)

Brief biting bits of basted bull

GW freshman Stacy Weisenstein was abducted from the University Yard by a UFO Monday. "Like, it just swooped out of the sky and stuff. It was, like, just like Close Encounters, you know," eyewitness Alyssa Sternberger said. Weisenstein was found the next day wandering the streets of Georgetown babbling, "Omigawd, they have Bloomie's in space." Later that day, while lunching in the Market Square, an alien being exploded from Weisenstein's stomach, killing her instantly. One observer was overheard to say, "At first I thought she had just run across some rancid yogurt, but when I saw that little creature running around I knew it was from the Super Burrito."

Vice President for Academic Affairs Roderick "Mister" French announced today that John Tower has been named the new Dean of the Columbian College. "Tower was out of work and down on his luck and we all decided, 'Hey, let's give the guy a break,'" French said. "Besides, he's a known drinker and womanizer and if that isn't a true reflection of most of the students enrolled in the liberal arts curriculum, then I don't know what is."

In a surprise move, student-run radio station WRGW-540 AM announced it would be changing its format from alternative music to country and western. "One of the DJs mistakenly confused the cover art of a Tammy Wynette record for that of the new Caligula Rat Snot LP," WRGW station manager John Confortits said. "When she played the song, our phone lines lit up. The callers loved it and were screaming for more. After we did an hour of Oak Ridge Boys and kept getting a positive response, we knew we had found the way to finally get listeners."

death, said, "Well, frankly, the kids played a great game, but the second half did us in."

GW President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt, upon hearing of Vane's demise, shook his head sadly and said, "It's too bad. I always liked that kid ... he looked just like me."

Scratch-it Editor-in-chief Joel von Ranson said he plans to announce today the formation of the The GW Scratch-it Mark Vane Memorial Scholarship Fund. Qualifications include wearing round wireframe glasses, being shorter than average, having a burning need to answer the telephone at all times of the day and night and, most importantly, the ability to constantly question every member of the GW community at some point during the school year about a story only you think is a big scoop. Recipients must spend at least five hours per day in the Hatchet offices.

"I'll miss Mark," a Scratch-it office receptionist said, "but it'll be great not having to take all those damn phone messages anymore."

Scratch-it sports editor Richard Quack called Vane "an inspiration to all victims of premature balding," and added "the editing chick will be really bummed."

Bullshit

happens all the time here

In a major medical breakthrough, a team of researchers at GW Hospital have found that AYDS, the chocolate candy appetite suppressant, cures AIDS, the disease that has killed thousands. "It was really just a shot in the dark," Drs. Fine Howard, Howard Fine and Howard Howard said at their news conference. "We had tried almost everything else to come up with a cure. This one just happened to work."

Rumors continue to fly around the 4th floor of the Marvin Center regarding GWUSA Executive Vice President-elect Jon Klee's starring role in a pornographic film in high school. "It's no rumor, I've seen it," said one student, who preferred to remain anonymous. "In the film, Klee is the keymaster in charge of a medieval king's harem. The plot's pretty thin, the acting's pretty weak, but I thought Jon was quite talented at doing the nasty."

GW's Office of Admissions announced today that teen pop star Debbie Gibson has returned a letter of intent to attend GW in the fall. Program Board Chairperson-elect Mary 'Could My Hair Be Any Redder' Conneely immediately signed Gibson to perform at the Labor Day festival. Gibson, reached while touring in support of her latest album, Electric Youth, said, "I'll be on the road and in the studio most of the time, so I'll probably miss most of my classes. But I heard that you didn't have to go to classes to get good grades at GW."

Johnny Mansard is holding a two-day seminar April 1 and 2 in the Marvin Center. The first seminar is "The Menu Line: Your Key to Success" followed by "The Art of Being the Drunk Guy." Ham and cheese hot wraps will be provided for all participants. For more information, call 994-JOHN.

Tracey "I Give More" Head discovered dried nose secretions on the wall of the fourth floor Marvin Center women's bathroom. After taking advantage of the sight and sharing it with some of her closest and dearest friends, she reported her find to GW Housekeeping, who refused to take action. For more information, call 994-SNOT.

Sources have alerted us that an unknown GW Scratch-it editor has been receiving mysterious phone calls from El Salvador from someone who identifies herself only as the "Finger-Woman." She says she has possession of incriminating photographs which could scar the future of this editor. For further information, call 676-HOOD.

Rich "We Love Kuester" Zack urinated on the H Street Academic Center sign and was detained by GW Security yesterday. "When you've loved and lost like 'the little fireman' has, you do things like pee in public," Zack said. For more information, call 994-PISS.

The von Ranson Center has published its first issue in the series "A Lady's Guide to Etiquette." Included in the guide are tips on speaking in a sing-song voice and the capitalization of the four seasons. Copies of the guide, along with a complimentary glass of purple punch, are available in The GW Scratch-it office. For more information, call 994-LADY.

GW Scratch-it News Editor Kristi "Amazon Woman" Messner hit her growth spurt last night and grew to 10.5 feet tall. Messner is now center for the GW Men's Basketball Team. "She played a great game. It was those other dumb assholes that lost it for us in the second half," Coach John Kuester said. For more information, call 994-TALL.

A GW Scratch-it staff writer is offering a $100 reward for the return of his 35mm camera, which was last seen in the Marriott second floor dining room. "I went up to get some more sausage," the writer said, "and when I got back, it was gone. I'm heartbroken." If you have any information, call 994-NERD.

Vain Mark and Sharyn Wiz finally tied the knot late last night on the fourth floor of the Marvin Center. "Sure she's a demented ho, but hey, she practices my kind of in-depth journalism," the ecstatic groom said. The glowing bride merely sighed and said, "I owe all this to Patrice—and believe me, she'll pay." A reception, catered by The Right Wing, was held early this morning. For further information, call 1-800-DIVORCE.

This year's porno flick, "Kinky Kane does Krawford," will premiere tomorrow night as part of RHA Awareness Week. The star, known to many as "K.K.," said, "I'm trying to shed my image as the girl next door. Deep inside, I'm an animal." For more information, call 676-NUDE.

GW Scratch-it Editorials Editor Chris Preble was released from bondage recently after swearing he would report to his keeper at least once every five minutes. When awakened at his keeper's home due to a Scratch-it emergency, he replied, "Uhhhh ... what???" For further information, call 676-MINE.

The GW Scratch-it photo staff was hired to cover the first annual "Tractorbutt Princess" contest last week. Due to a technical malfunction, all photographs were lost. For more information, call 1-800-EXPOSED.

An unidentifiable GW Scratch-it editor covered her entire body with tattoos of little snakes sitting on mushrooms yesterday. "It's addictive," she said. "After the first one I just had a nagging urge to get more and more ... like potato chips." For further information, call 994-TATU.

A member of the Scratch-it sports staff could not be found following the first and only win of the GW Men's Basketball team. "We were celebrating," he said, breathing heavily with his companion. For more information, call 994-BALL.

Scratch-it Assistant Arts Editor Jon Druy mysteriously resigned last night, citing a "career move." Sources say he is now lead singer for the heavy metal band Mudhoney. For more information, call 676-ROCK.

Scratch-it Editor Patrice Sonberg consoled members of GW's cancelled badminton and wrestling teams last night with, as one teammate put it, "her womanly wiles." Sonberg could not be reached for comment, but reports indicate she is now a patient in the GW Medical Center's Sex Crimes Division. For more information, call 1-800-RAH-TEAM.

'TrachtenDome' to replace Smith Center

by Elvis Musberger
Scratch-it Bump-On-A-Log

In a surprise announcement yesterday, GW Director of Athletics Steve "The Butcher" Bilsky said the Smith Center will be expanded, improved and re-christened "The TrachtenDome."

GW President Stephen Jowls Trachtenborge said he felt honored when he heard the news. "I'm just tickled pink over this and I can't wait to get to the University Club for a seven-course celebratory meal," he said. "That old fart of an ex-prez, (Lloyd) Helliott, had to wait 23 years before getting a school named after him and I get a dome named after me in less than a year. I honestly can't think of a person at this school more fitting for this distinction than me. At this rate, I'll own this school by the time I retire."

The dome, to be designed by architect Michael Brady, won't cost the students a cent in tuition money, administrators said, because advance ticket sales from next year's men's basketball schedule will cover all costs. Plans call for the dome to be built on the current site of the Smith Center as well as the block across the street presently occupied by row houses, GW's tennis courts and the Grant School.

Displaced residents from those areas will live in the Dome's luxury boxes once construction is complete. Students from the Grant School have been told to "get off our goddamned property!!" During construction, the present Smith Center will continue to be used for athletics, but students will not be able to use the pool, the weight rooms, the jogging track or the main arena. District of Columbia officials contacted at the Ramada Inn said 22nd Street will be closed during the building of the TrachtenDome, with the eventual construction of an underground passage to the Dome to be known as the TrachtenTunnel. The Dome is scheduled for completion in early 1991.

Bilsky said the new facility will seat 44,000 for basketball and 32,000 for tractor pulls. The inspiration for building a domed stadium for GW came to him while watching other schools play, he said. "Syracuse plays in a dome and they always make it into the NCAA tournament. With the TrachtenDome, GW will finally have a shot at the Final Four, or of at least hosting it."

Bilsky added that many facilities not presently available in the Smith Center will be included in the new Dome. These include expanded locker rooms, indoor tennis courts, aerobics rooms and saunas for the female cheerleaders, a driving range for golf, a 70-meter ski-jump ramp, two cock-fighting rings and "a really big office for myself." Also, plans for the TrachtenDome's new basketball floor call for a parquet (BUTTER) design a la the Boston Garden.

When asked for his opinion on leading his team in battle in a brand new arena, GW men's basketball coach John Kuester said "the kids played real hard. If the wheels had only fallen off their (GW's opponent's) wheelchairs in the second half, we could have pulled it out."

Asked for his opinion on the TrachtenDome, Smith Center Director Mike Peller, while herding sheep out of his office, said, "I'm psyched! Now we can get some truly awesome bands to play here at GW, like Mr. Mister or Juice Newton."

In a related announcement, Bilsky revealed that GW had decided to change the school nickname from the Colonials to the Runnin' Revolutionaries. "It's mostly to reflect the new direction the athletic program has taken with the addition of the cross-country team," he said. "Besides, it's got even more syllables than Colonials and will be next to impossible to cheer at any game."

Bilsky, Kuester screw GW athletic department

AD cancels everything but basketball

The Missing Link
Scratch-it Caveman

The GW Department of Athletics and Recreation has cancelled all intercollegiate Division I sports with the exception of men's basketball, according to Executive Director of Athletics Steve "the knife" Bilsky.

"I just think John Kuester (GW's 36-77 head basketball coach) did such a great job with our kids this year," an axe-wielding Bilsky said. "We were in Sports Illustrated and our apathetic students actually came to some of the games."

Bilsky said the University's other sports, like wrestling and badminton, were winning too much and did not bring GW the recognition men's basketball did. "We haven't won anything before, so why start now," he said.

Money saved from the cancellations will go toward making Bilsky's office bigger and "getting some better-looking babes in here. Those mooses on the women's basketball team reminded me of professional wrestlers."

Kuester, who is quickly going bald, was elated with the decision, but would not directly comment, saying only, "The kids played a great game. If we coulda' scored in the second half we mighta been in the game. Can you believe I still have a job at this school?"

Other coaches expressed shock and anger with

Bilsky and the way he went about making the decision, saying they were not consulted. Coaches added that they were forced out of their offices by a machete-swinging masked man in a polyester suit, screaming, "All of you out now or I'll force you to watch Big Bill Yaglou eat!!"

Bilsky said he will now be able to spend more time figuring out ways to keep students out of the Smith Center and placing bets for Pete Rose. "It (the athletic department) will pretty much become my personal kingdom," he said.

In a related development Asst. Athletic Director Mike Gargano said winners of the half-time shootout contest, which caused so much controversy earlier this year, will receive a date with a GW cheerleader. Needless to say he has gotten no response. Gargano and GW Student Association President Raffi Terzian will choose all contestants for the contest.

University President Stephen Joel Tractorbutt was pleased with the decision. "As long as I make some money on it and my ego gets massaged, I'm all for it," the short, portly elf said.

Bilsky responded to charges that he was violating the law by saying only, "It will never hold up in court, you can't prove a thing!!"

Coach gets new deal; players canned

by The Kids
They played a great game

The National Collegiate Athletic Association kicked everyone who played for the 88-89 GW men's basketball off the team at the end of the season because, as one official put it, "they suck!"

The NCAA will allow GW to recruit anyone it wants for next season. "They were an embarrassment to GW, the NCAA, America, Dean Smith (my hero), street people and, most importantly, me," GW head coach John Kuester said.

"The kids played hard ... but they only won once," Kuester added. "Someone had to go and it sure as hell wasn't going to be me. If it wasn't for me, we would have been 0-28."

The Colonials did go 0-28 in their past season, however, because the NCAA voided their win over UMass. "UMass is such a nice school, they don't deserve to lose to such a pathetic bunch of losers," UMass graduate Julius Erving said.

In a related story, Kuester has been given a 10-year, $25 million contract by GW Flunky Steve Bilsky. "John wanted a deal like Danny Manning's, and I couldn't see GW basketball without my sexy buddy, John Kuester, so I gave it all to him," Bilsky belched.

Sources close to Kuester said he wanted a life-time contract, worth $75 million, plus shower shots of GW Spokesman Bullwinkle and his assistant Rocky. Kuester reportedly shouted at Bilsky, "I'm the best damn coach in America! I played for Dean Smith! Billy Packer couldn't carry my jock!"

Kuester agreed to the deal when the 1989 red Bilskymobile was thrown in, but Kuester was forced to fire all 781 of his assistants.

In an effort to recruit players who will help GW win a national championship, Kuester has meet with Barry Switzer, Dana Kirk and Eddie Sutton. "The kids have tried hard all season ... but these corrupt coaches told me to get a ho or two, some crack, some guns and give lots of under-the-table payouts," Kuester said.

Top on Kuester's list of players is Utah Jazz center Mike Brown, who graduated from GW in 1985. "The kids played a great game ... but he was here last time GW had a winning season," Kuester rationalized. "We'll give him the West End, some AK-47's, $4 million a year and frequent visits from the GW women's basketball team."

Recent grads Brian Royal and Max Blank will ride the bench for Kuester again this season. "Those kids played a great game ... and I need to see about 16 or 17 guys in suits on the bench," Kuester said. "It makes me feel important."
